FISH SCHOOL

Of all the creatures in the sea,
A fish is smart as smart can be.

While others swim and play it cool,
A fish is happy in a school!

How many fish are in this class?
Answer quick and you will pass.

Here's a hint, a little clue,
When counting fish, just look askew!

How many fish do you see?

Welcome to the Lesson:

A Scientific Mishap

organizing a story with purposeful paragraphs

Lesson was created by NNWP Teacher Consultant Dena Trison. Check out all of Dena's online writing lessons by clicking here.

The mentor text:

Dav Pilkey's Dogzilla is pure, laugh-out-loud fun! This writing lesson has students analyze and impersonate the book's clever title.

Three-Sentence Overview of this Lesson:

After enjoying the clever title and humorous writing style of Dav Pilkey's Dogzilla, students will imagine what type of scientific lab mishap created Pilkey's title character. Then, they will brainstorm other interesting creatures that might be created during scientific lab accidents. Using this lesson's graphic organizer, students will create a three-part story that tells the story of a scientific mishap that leads to the creation of a new creature. Teachers: Click here to see the entire lesson plan.
